College Acceptance

NOTABLE FACTS:

A key measure of college readiness is acceptance into college after graduation from high school. Some students enroll in college immediately upon graduation, others matriculate to four-year institutions via community college and still others elect to take time off from academic studies before enrolling in college. Therefore, the district monitors students' enrollment in college for five years after graduation from high school. For the purpose of this report, all students who enroll in a four-year college, public or private, within five years of graduation from high school are counted. The data we use comes from the National Clearinghouse, www.studentclearinghouse.org, to which 92% of all U.S. colleges and universities report. The reports that follow are limited to these data.

WHAT THE RESULTS SHOW:

The vast majority of students (76%) enrolled in college immediately after high school. Higher percentages of Asian, Filipino, and White students pursue college immediately. Westview High School has a significantly higher percentage compared to other high schools, driven by 55% entering four-year colleges. After five years, 12% more students enter four-year colleges.
